The Health Care Transformation Task Force Releases “Industry and Consumer Perspectives on Medicare Advantage as an Effective Driver of Value Transformation”

Today, the Health Care Transformation Task Force (Task Force) released a new resource highlighting the Medicare Advantage (MA) program’s value proposition as an effective driver of value-based care and related alternative payment models (APMs). This resource, titled “Industry and Consumer Perspectives on Medicare Advantage as an Effective Driver of Value Transformation,” describes how MA’s cost-sharing, supplemental benefits, care coordination and performance accountability elements establish a flexible runway for payers and providers who want to participate in value-focused collaborations.

“Health care organizations continuously seek productive strategies to provide coordinated, person-centered care through value-based payment models,” said Jeff Micklos, Task Force Executive Director. “This resource reflects how MA is well positioned as a learning lab for payers and providers interested in collaborating on innovative payment and care delivery models.”

MA continues to grow at a significant rate, both in terms of beneficiary enrollment and the number of MA plans available. “The MA program is growing and deemed valuable by both enrollees and our provider partners,” said Angela Meoli, Senior Vice President, Enterprise Initiatives, CVS Health, and Task Force Vice Chair. “The program has inherent flexibilities that allow plans and providers to innovate in ways that traditional Medicare cannot.”

MA provides an important platform for payers and providers to develop the infrastructure and partnership necessary to improve outcomes through value-based care. As the program grows, opportunities remain for MA to serve enrollees and other stakeholders even better. “MA allows payers and providers to work together to serve a growing population of Medicare beneficiaries with increasingly complex conditions and concerns,” said Emily Brower, Senior Vice President for Clinical Integration and Physician Services, Trinity Health, and Task Force Chair. “This resource highlights both the positive aspects of MA, as well as opportunities for improvement to be an even more valuable driver of value-based care.”
